How We Collect and Use Your Information

FAQs on Cookies We Use

1. What are cookies?

A cookie is a small piece of information sent from websites you visit (including The Hindu Group websites) to your computer to help identify you quickly. Cookies are not used to identify individuals personally and no personal information is stored in relation to the cookies.

2. What are site functionality cookies?

Our websites use browser cookies to determine whether a user is signed in or not. We also use cookies to ensure that a piece of information is only displayed to users a certain number of times.

3. What are third-party cookies?

We use third-party advertising companies to display advertising when you visit our websites. Cookies are used in the software that displays these advertisements, known as third-party cookies. These cookies may be used to help display more relevant advertisements to you.

These companies may use information (not including your name or email address) about your visits to this and other sites in order to provide advertisements about goods and services of interest to you.

Third-party cookies may include behavioural targeting cookies. These are also intended to help display more relevant advertisements to you by using information about other sites you may have visited previously.

Third-party cookies also include those from our data analytics providers. These allow us to analyse the use of our sites and do not identify users individually.

4. How can you manage your cookies?

We use a Consent Management Platform that helps you with managing your preferences with Cookies used on our websites. You can access this platform with this link:
