Who are we and what do we do?

We're Trainline. We're made up of a core group of companies working together to help you get where you need to be:

- Trainline.com Limited
- Trainline SAS

Like you, your data goes on a journey. How we collect and use your data depends on where you travel and which train or coach company you travel with.

Your personal data and our promises to you

Your personal data is very important to us. Whenever you use our website or app, we're committed to these four privacy promises:

- We'll be crystal clear about the personal data we use, how we use it and – most importantly – why we need it.
- We'll give you choices when it comes to your data.
- We'll keep your personal data secure, using the best possible technology, people and processes.

- We've cut the jargon, to help you make informed choices about your personal data.

Personal data you give us

You may need to give us your personal data to use our services and book tickets – more on that below.

Personal data is anything that helps identify. It's things like:

- name
- email or billing address
- age
- payment card details
- phone number
- home address
- details of any relevant railcards, discount or loyalty cards you might use

Personal data you give us about others

You may be doing a trip with other guests whose details we may also need in order for them to travel.

By entering someone else's personal data, you confirm you've either got their permission to give it, or permission from their parent or guardian (if the passenger is under 16).

How we use your information

Keeping your data

While you're using our services, your personal data will be safe with us, but we'll never keep it for longer than we need to.

As soon as we don't need your personal data to offer our full services to you, we'll make sure it's either deleted or anonymised.

Cookies

Our website and app are so easy to use, thanks to Cookies. Cookies are tiny crumbs of personal data that we automatically collect when you use our website or app.

Let's say you visited our website and changed your settings to pay in euros instead of pounds. Cookies help us remember your currency preference - so we can show you prices in euros next time. Pretty neat, right?

Our Cookies Policy gives a full breakdown of how we use Cookies, and how you can edit your preferences.

Personalising your experience

Just like a friendly barista who knows your daily coffee order, we want to offer you a personal service. The barista recognises you when they see your face, but we rely on cookies to know it's you.

We combine cookie data with booking and search history to tailor your experience.

See our Cookies Policy for more info.

International data transfers

We transfer your personal data to other Trainline companies in our core group and service providers outside the European Economic Area (EEA). We only work with service providers that prove to us that they have the same high standards around protection of your data as we do.

Your data is always securely processed. Where we transfer your personal data outside the EEA, we have rules and steps put in place to make sure your personal data is kept safe and protected. Usually this means we'll have standard contractual clauses approved by the European Commission in our contracts with parties outside the EEA, or we will rely on European Commission adequacy decisions.

Security

We've put in place stringent and accredited security measures to prevent your personal data from being accidentally or maliciously accessed, used, altered or deleted without explicit authorisation. In addition, we strictly limit access to your data to just those employees, contractors and trusted third parties who have a business need to access it, and they are all subject to binding contractual confidentiality obligations. For further information on our security practices, please see our dedicated security page.

Guest check out

If you're in a rush, you can book tickets without signing in or creating an account. Your confirmation email gives you the option to create an account or link your booking to an existing account. We'd recommend doing this, it'll be easier to manage your booking.

We'll update your account with any changes you make to your marketing preferences.
